Internet

The tribal program that reimburses for internet service expired on Dec 31, 2022. There is a federal program that can assist with paying internet service bills if you qualify. It's from the Federal Communication Commission (FCC) and it's called the Affordable Connectivity Program.

You can go to this website to see if you are eligible:

https://www.affordableconnectivity.gov/?utm_source=FCCApplyNow

LifeLine

This is another program that the FCC has to assist with paying for cell phone or land line service. You can sign up for it here if eligible:

<https://www.lifelinesupport.org/>

Free All-in-One computers

The tribe has 3 All-in-One computers that we are willing to give to those who do not have a desktop computer at their home. These were formally used at the library. If you want one, please let Stuart Christian know at 505-455-4105 or email at tsd@sanipueblo.org. If we have more than 4 requests, we will use a lottery to give out the computers.

Enrollment Office

We remind everyone that any Tribal Member can review their own tribal membership file and insert information in it such as copies of your birth certificate, marriage certificate and other documents. Our files are enclosed in a fire-resistant file cabinet, so they should be safe for future generations. Please drop by the Tribal Services Department and review your file.

If you would like assistance or need more information regarding any of the topics mentioned above, please drop by the Tribal Services Department (call 455-4105 to ensure Stuart is present) and we can assist.

Why Recycle?

From Roberta Trujillo, Transfer Station

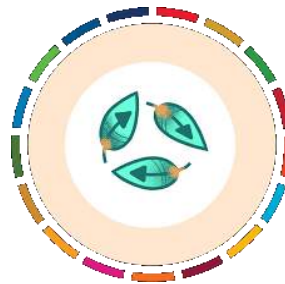

Recycling is critical to our efforts to conserve the earth's natural resources. Recycling also reduces litter and the costs of solid waste disposal.

This Acoma Pueblo pot tells an ancient story of recycling. Pueblo Indian women crafted clay pots that lasted for years of use. When the pots eventually broke, they were not thrown into a dump. The broken pots were crushed down to a fine clay powder. The powder was then soaked to soften it to a workable clay consistency. This recovered clay was used to make strong and beautiful new pots.

Today, we use many materials once, and then consider them waste. Like broken pots, these materials are actually precious resources. We are all learning that we cannot afford to continue throwing away resources in our garbage cans. Our task now is to develop again the age-old art of recycling.

Recycling is defined as the collecting, manufacturing, and selling/buying of new products made from what once was thought of as waste. The recycling symbol of chasing arrows on the cover represents the three components necessary to make a difference through recycling.

2023 NATIONAL SEED SWAP DAY LAST SATURDAY IN JANUARY

National Seed Swap Day on the last Saturday in January serves as a reminder to gardeners that spring is on its way. It is also an ideal time for gardeners to gather and swap seeds in preparation for starting seeds indoors.

The seed swap is a fundamental part of human history. Seeds were one of the first commodities valued and traded. Today, modern gardeners collect and exchange seeds for many reasons ranging from cultivating rare, heirloom varieties to basic thrift. The exchange of seeds perpetuates biodiversity, too. It is an act of giving and the ultimate form of recycling.

HOW TO OBSERVE #Seed Swap Day

- Exchange seeds with friends, attend a local seed swap, or help organize one.
- Post your events online so they are easily found using #Seed Swap Day
- Experienced gardeners offer seed collection, labeling, and preservation tips.
- Generate interest in your seed swaps. Plan urban gardens or community gardens. Not only do they improve the look of your community but they also provide nutritious food, too.
- Offer classes for starting seeds indoors and successful transplanting.
- Be sure to include children. They love to garden!
- Attend local events and show your support by volunteering.
- Share your seed swap events and use #Seed Swap Day to post on social media.

Na'in bin ung sha

The mission of DECP is to preserve and protect the natural environment and the cultural resources of the Pueblo de San Ildefonso, to assess risks to human health and welfare, both quantitatively and qualitatively, and protect the health and welfare of the Tribal community.

History

OTOWI PAST AND PRESENT

By Darryl Martinez, Water Quality Technician

THE NAME OTOWI COMES FROM the Tewa word po'tsuwi'i meaning “gap where water sinks.” It is an appropriately descriptive name for the area, located along the Rio Grande at the head of White Rock Canyon. In 1886, a station and bridge were built here for the Chili Line, a narrow-gauge railroad that ran from Antonito, Colorado to Santa Fe.

PAST

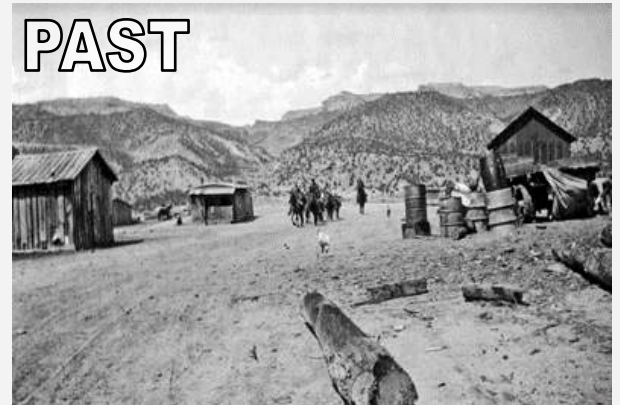

PRESENT

In 1923, a post office was built here to serve the Los Alamos Ranch School. In 1928, Edith Warner, a former schoolteacher, was hired to manage the station. She came looking for solitude, but her little station soon became a gathering place for visitors near and far. Edith became friendly both with the inhabitants of the Ranch school (especially the founder’s daughter, Peggy Pond) and the local San Ildefonso tribe. She also opened a small shop, restaurant, and tea room that welcomed everyone.

Just as soon as the Chili Line closed in 1941, Otowi became another kind of bridge—one between the old world of Native Americans and ranchers and the new world of the Atomic Age. When the Manhattan Project came to Los Alamos, the house at Otowi Bridge became a frequent destination for nuclear physicists.

J. Robert Oppenheimer, the father of the atomic bomb himself, kept a standing reservation at the restaurant for whenever he wanted to dine. In particular, Edith’s chocolate cake became a local favorite. The relationship between the scientific laboratory, Edith Warner, and the Pueblo people is told in Peggy Pond Church’s novel, The House at Otowi Bridge. Edith died in 1951, and was buried in the traditional Pueblo way, with no markers except broken pottery shards. Her home, too, rests on Pueblo land, now unmarked and unnoticed as time and traffic pass it by.

PAST

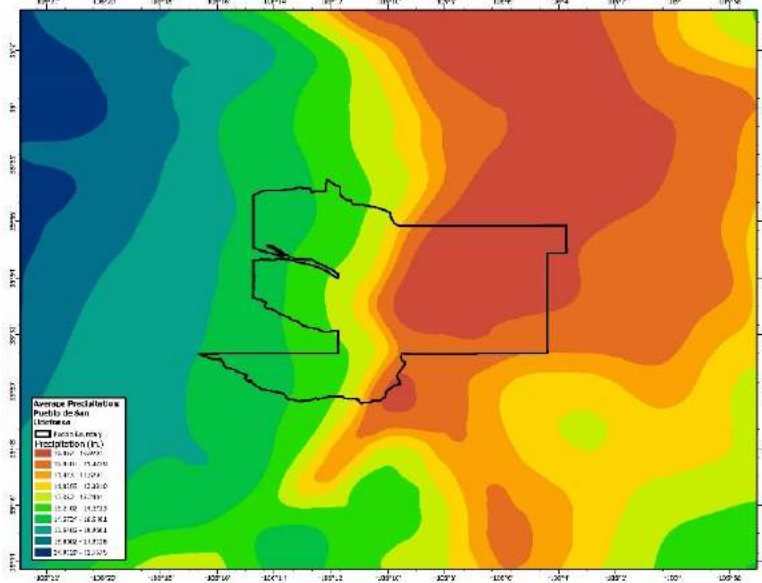

PRESENT

This is just a little history on places where San Ildefonso Environmental Department takes water samples during the summer months. We call this site R10, which is Buckman. As you can see by the old photos times have change from 1941 – 2022.

2022 PRECIPITATION: GOOD BUT NOT GREAT

By Nick Hanser, GIS Specialist

2022 was a good year for precipitation, but not a great year like many had predicted. With a strong monsoon we were receiving above average precipitation for most of the year but a dry fall and start of Winter has brought us in line with hitting average this year. A strong La Niña occurring this year pushed the jet stream to higher latitudes and contributed to higher precipitation further North and a drier Winter here.

DECP is concerned with tracking climate change and addressing how we can best adapt to changing conditions. The map shows the average precipitation values in bands ranging from 10 inches annually in the dark red band to about 30 inches in the dark blue. San I averages between 10 and 16 inches annually in the form of rain and snow.

According to the USDA’s SNOTEL precipitation report (<https://wcc.sc.egov.usda.gov/reports/UpdateReport.html?report=New+Mexico&format=SNOTEL+Precipitation+Update+Report>) the Upper Rio Grande Basin is at 97 percent of median precipitation for the year. If the current trend keeps up we will end up falling just short of average. So, here’s hoping that we get some more snowy days before the year is out.

Despite reaching close to average, this year is representative of aridification occurring across the Southwest. According to an NRCS report (<https://statesummaries.ncics.org/chapter/nm/>) we are seeing less precipitation and more warm days annually.

2020 was the worst year in recent record for precipitation and high temperatures with 2021 improving on that slightly. It is reassuring to see 2022 get closer to average, at least, but we do know that dry years are sure to come in the future. Water security and climate adaptation are important things to keep in mind going forward. A good tool for keeping track of meteorological phenomena next year is the website www.windy.com which shows current conditions and many other interesting variables.

HOW CLIMATE CHANGE IMPACTS WEATHER
THE SCIENCE
 CHANGES IN THE WATER CYCLE ARE INCREASING THE RISK OF DROUGHTS AND FLOODS.

- Higher temperatures mean there is more evaporation from the land and sea into the atmosphere.
- As air gets warmer, it can hold more water vapor. This can lead to more intense rainstorms.
- Intense rainstorms increase the risk of flooding. Much of the water runs off into rivers and streams, doing little to dampen soil.
- This, combined with increased temperatures, increases the risk of drought.

HOW TO SAVE WATER IN YOUR GARDEN

Managing Water in Hot, Dry Weather, & Drought

Water is a valuable resource. Certain parts of the world, however, have ongoing droughts, while others experience sporadic dry-spells. Regardless of your water situation, you can always start conserving water by looking to your own backyard.

SELECT DROUGHT-TOLERANT PLANTS.  Choose plants that are accustomed to the climate.	DON'T USE BIG PLANTS.  The bigger it is, the more water it needs.	USE ECOLOGICAL MULCH.  This will help keep water evaporation minimal.
